

Can mathematical modelling predict epidemic progression?

V. Volpert

Recent COVID-19 pandemic stimulated intensive research in all scientific fields. In mathematical epidemiology, classical models were revisited and new models were developed. In this presentation, we will introduce new epidemiological models based on integro-differential equations. We will use them to describe available data on epidemic progression and we will discuss whether they can predict further epidemic outbreaks.